IMPROMTU VERSES-

F. B.

To a Thomas Cat.

Thomas cat of sable coat,
Gleaming eye and piercing note
Voice of wider range and power
Than the bearded william goat!

In the day time meek as moses,
Manner gentler than the does is,
But the ebon midnight, Thomas,
All your fiendishness discloses.

When on tired eyes are falling
Tired eyelids, your wierd calling
Wakens like the cry despairing,
Of a soul in hades falling.

Voice of mroous variation,
And marvelous intonation,
Nightly practice neath my window
Shows the fruits of cultivation.

Now an orphaned infant's wailing,
Then a Stentor fiercely hailing,
Then a shriek of wild defiance—
Notes and fences jointly scaling.

Feelin's toward you are not tender.
Feline of masculine gender;
If I had you I am sure that
Bodily harm to you I'd render.

To the Inventor of Barbed Wire.
I hope in the world that's to come after this

The reward you deserve that you will not miss;

If the dictum be this there will be no dissention.

Through eternity straddle your hellish invention!

Pleasant Event.

The lawn fete given by the mission band of the Universalist church Friday evening at the residence of Judge Polk Cansler was a pleasant event socially and was largely attended. Quite a handsome sum was realized for the good work which the mission band is prosecuting.

HOPKINSVILLE'S NEW DAILY.

(Bowling Green Courier.)

The HOPKINSVILLE KENTUCKIAN, daily, Charley Meacham's new venture, is an exceedingly bright and attractive paper and will rank with the best in country journalism.

There is no more faithful and clear journalist in the State and none that wields a more attractive and brighter pen than does Charlie Meacham. He stands with the foremost and deserves the high place he so securely holds. If the readers of his realm fail to respond to this enterprising movement it will not be creditable to their generally acknowledged intelligence and prompt recognition of a good thing.
